SYMPTOMS: SAMPTOMS:

The symptoms of Catarrh, as they generally appear, are at first very slight. Persons find that they have a cold, that they have frequent attacks, and are more sensitive to the changes of temperature. In this condition the nose may be dry, or a slight discharge, thin and arrive and, afterwards becoming thick and adhesive. As the disease becomes chronic, the discharges are increased in quantity and changed in quality; they are now thick and heavy and are hawked or coughed off. The sceretions are offensive, causing a bad breath; the voice is thick and masal; the eyes are weak; the sense of the smell is lessened or distribuyed; darfares frequently takes place. Another important and common symptom of Catarrh is, that the person is obliged to clear his threat in the morning of a thick or slimy uncours, which has fallen down from the head during the night. When this takes place the person may be sure that the disease is on its
